

"Arctic Voice is an inspirational educational project. The latest report from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change reminds us just how urgently we need to address climate change, and to work together to make any kind of lasting difference. The whole Arctic region is already showing signs of dramatic change, and it will rapidly get a lot worse. Linking up with indigenous communities and schools in the Arctic is one way in which we can combine forces, in practice, to help address these threats."

Sir Jonathon Porritt CBE

Where are they going?

...to Arctic Canada via the North West Passage starting at Inuvik, in the Mackenzie Delta, travelling east through Nunavut ending at Chesterfield Inlet. The journey will be made by Kayak and dog sledge, and will take about eight months.
